(c) Read the following passage and answer the questions given below :—

If popularity is the benchmark of capability, the 'dirty' fuel is now measuring up to it. Diesel had been a loser for long, trying to catch up with gasoline in terms of efficiency and performance. It was much- maligned by rattling technology and noisy operations. Now after decades, diesel cars have taken over the Indian market leaving petrol- fired cars behind.

For the first half of 2010, the Indian auto market witnessed a spurt in the sales of diesel propelled cars. So much so in India's premium segment- from Maruti Swift to the BMW 7 Series category- 59% of the 6.88 lakh units sold in the first half of 2010 were diesel powered. The percentage is even higher than Europe, where the market is evenly divided between both the fuels.

Auto companies in India attribute this change to technology advancements that have given diesel higher fuel efficiency and better pick up. Historically the sales of diesel - driven cars had plummeted due to high maintenance costs and premium pricing.

The gradual change has now become a major determining factor for the success and failure of new cars. The verdict is clearly in favour of diesel- driven cars, Customers are pleasantly surprised by the clear advantage of instant acceleration and higher torques offered by modern diesel engines, even as petrol is trying to catch up on the technological changes.

For Indians with deep pockets, it is the luxury car segment running on diesel that is most popular. Consider this: Of the 446 cars in the BMW 7 series, Audi B and Mere 5 Class models, sold in the first six months of 2010, 79% had diesel engines. Indian customers prefer cheaper diesel models which provide better acceleration and return on investment. The times are not far away when diesel will be the strongest portfolio across all segments. The diesel strategy has paid Toyota rich dividends. In the premium sports utility vehicle(SUV) segment , its diesel Fortuner, launched last year, has ended the domination of competitive models like the erstwhile segment leaders, Honda's CRY and Mitsubishi Outlander that are only available in petrol versions.

The preference for diesel is particularly noticeable in premium cars, priced above Rs 4 lakh and luxury sedans and SUVs in the Rs 1 Crore bracket. The affinity for diesel also follows the introduction of the much acclaimed common rail injection (CRDi) technology that was first launched in 2002 by Hyundai in its Ascent sedan. Sharp-injector based fuel technology allowed diesel to burn much faster with learner operations, leading to higher fuel efficiency and faster accelerations.

Over the years, several modifications in diesel technology have been taken up by auto companies. Even entry-level cars made by Indian companies like Mahindra's Scorpio and Tata Motors' Indica now come loaded with modern diesel engines based on the CRDi technology, that was once the domain of high-priced cars.

Answer the following questions by choosing the right options.
